

WHERE FRANCE

WHAT WHITE

WHEN
DAILY

CHATEAU HAUTE CARIZIERE MUSCADET SÈVRE ET MAINE SUR LIE

Glinting mica inflects dappled dazzling sparkle to the softly crushed Melons, though you will see nary a bubble.

CONCEPTUAL DOPPELGÄNGER

Just look at it! You just want to pop it into your mouth and chew. I suggest you try it (my uncle is a dentist and would love to fix all the damage - he only takes cash). Better idea. Drink the soil around it. Swirl it. Swish it. Let that shit linger on your swollen pink tongue, allowing all the points of the molecules to poke into each crevice of your mouth sponge. Muscadet, from around the way, planted way way back when. Again - look at the flint - looks like candy, but will brace and shock before you unlock the fruit center. Remember the owl? How many licks? This one is "how many sips...?"

WINEMAKER Daniel Bideau

REGION Loire

GRAPE VARIETY Melon de Bourgogne

SOIL Mica-schist, which is flakey and rich in mica and quartz

AGE OF VINES Planting dates vary with an average of 30 years old and replantings every 40 years

PRODUCTION 55,000 bottles

VITI/VINI

Organic practices and certified sustainable by Terra Vitis. Their De-stemmed and crushed gently. Natural settling and fermentation without additions over about 2 weeks in stainless steel. Sur lie all winter and bottled in Spring.

PRODUCER

Chateau Haute Cariziere is a 35 ha estate. All practices on the farm are organic, and a portion is even certified. The vineyard is a family affair currently in its 4th generation. At the helm are husband and wife team Daniel Bideau and Marie-Beatrice Giraud. Marie-Beatrice's grandfather originally acquired the vines in 1909 and she has been involved with the estate all her life. The site is quite special, being located on the former Armorican Massif, south-east facing and planted on very varied and quite ancient soil. Their recipe for quality is simple. Respect the environment and endeavor to ensure that all practices aim to foster biodiversity and sustainability. The result is the production of world class Muscadet.

